OFFICIAL OPENING OF BROADWAY DUE EARLY IN AUGUST

Funds For Work Are Now Nearly All Available

SMALL BALANCE STILL DUE

Prope;ty May be Sold To Pay Assesments

The long hoped for event in Redwood City's business district is soon to transpire. The opening of Broadway across Main street will actually take place next month. Probably on the first of the month.

It was stated at the city hall this week that practically all of the assessments which were due on the 9th of this month have been paid. Less than $3000 is still outstanding on assessments. It is hoped by the city government that all of the assessments may be paid without having to sell the property upon which they are due, but unless paid within a few days the land will be sold and the proceeds placed in the Broadway extension fund.

It is only necessary that the assessments be paid and the actual work of extending the street will begin. It is estimated that by the middle of August the buildings which at present block the lower end of Broadway will be removed.

The opening of this street is considered very important at this time as it ties in with two of the most important developments of the peninsula; the extension of the Bay Shore highway, which is now under way, and the proposed construction of a line by the Western Pacific railroad company which was announced last week. Both of these developments will be east of the present termination of Broadway, but both are expected to connect with the extension of that street.

It was stated this week that these developments and the opening of Broadway are already causing considerable business activity in Redwood City. It was reported by Building Inspector I. C. Drathman that building has shown a marked upward turn here which he attributes to these outstanding developments which are expected here within the very near future.

Miss Pearl Beer and Miss Edith Jordan will leave today for a motor trip to the Yosemite valley. The young ladies expect to be gone about a week.

At the meeting of Redwood City Lodge F. & A. M. last evening the members enjoyed two interesting talks, one was by David Stark of Woodside, who told of his travels about the world. The other was by Roy W. Cloud, who spoke on early Masonic history of California.

TALK ON FLOWER INDUSTRY AT C. OF C.

William A. Newsom, Jr., of the firm of Boodell & Newson, wholesale flower dealers of this city, spoke before the regular semi-monthly meeting of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce last Monday. Newsom told in an interesting manner of the great flower industry of the peninsula.

The firm of Boodell & Newsom, he stated, expects to ship between 25,000 and 35,000 packages of cut flowers this year to markets in all parts of the country. The annual crop of chysanthemums, he estimates will be worth approximately $1,000,000.

All shipments of chrysanthemums will from now on be made directly from this city instead of being shipped to San Francisco for packing and reshipment. Boodell & Newsom have established an office and warehorse here, where the flowers are made ready for shipments to all parts of the country. The firm is also conducting a concerted advertising campaign for Redwood City and the peninsula.

KIWANIANS HEAR TALK ON WASHINGTON'S SOCIAL LIFE

The experience of a newspaperman in the social life of Washington were intrestingly told Wednesday for members of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club by Bill Billmeyer of the San Jose News. Billmeyer was for a number of years publisher of two Washington dailies, and his position made attendance at many of the social events at the capital possible.

Experience at the formal affairs and during the recent disarmament conference were told in a manner which was interesting as well as instruitive. The chairman of the meeting was J. D. Hedge, editor of the Standard.

CLOSING CROSSING MEETS PROTEST

The proposed abandonment of a portion of O'Neil avenue, near Belmont met with a violent protest before the board of supervisors Monday morning. The petition to have that portion of O'Neil avenue which crosses the S. P. tracks abandoned was made by the developers of Port San Francisco. These people plan, if their petition is granted to construct a much wider and better crossing nearer San Francisco to connect Harbor avenue.

The matter was heard before the board of supervisors Monday morning at the regular meeting of that body. The petitioners were represented by Attorney Joseph B. Gordon of the firm of Kirkbride & Gordon. A protest to the plan signed by 118 citizens was filed with the board and read by the clerk. Many of the protestants were present in person.

The matter was finally laid over by the board until August 20th in order that the situation may be studied thoroughly.

George Bell and his daughter, Miss Mary Bell, are spending their vacation in the Yosemite valley. They left here Sunday and will remain for two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Rice are vacationing on the Feather river in Plumas county.

COMMUNITY IS SADDENED AT TEACHER DEATH

Miss Wolfenden Ends Own Life In Oakland Home

This community was saddened Tuesday to learn of the untimely death in Oakland of Miss Katherine Wolfenden, who for the past nine years has been a teacher in the Oakland high school. Miss Wolfenden, despondent due to ill health, ended her life by hanging herself in the basement of her home in Oakland. A former attempt to end her life by taking poison had been frustarted by the vigilance of a nurse who had been taking care of her.

Miss Wolfenden, prior to accepting a pisition in the Oakland school, was for 11 years a teacher in the Sequoia Union High School. She eame here in 1908 and taught Latin and German. Later Spanish was introduced and Miss Wolfenden also taught this language until she severed her connections with the school in 1919. During the greater part of that time she was also vice-principal of the school.

Miss Wolfenden was one of the most popular teachers in the school. In addition to her work with her classes, she devoted her efforts to making the school life of the few pupils who formed the student body of that time a pleasant one.

Always active and vivacious, Miss Wolfenden was the center of the social life of the school during her time here, and many of the pleasant parties of the school were held at her home on Webster street, where she lived with Miss Edna Trunman, the domestic science teacher. Together they acted as hostesses to class after class of budding seniors at a time when the life of the school was less complicated than it is now and when a class party was an event to be remembered. Sometimes parties were held in the hall of the old high school. Then it was Miss Wolfenden who presided at the piano, standing up so that she might watch over the ancient instrument and stopping any couples who might be ragging, a type of dancing which did not meet with favor from the school authorities of that time.

In her work in the classes, Miss Wolfenden was thorough and sometimes severe. She set a high standard for her pupils and spared no efforts to see that they reached that standard. Many of her vacations were spent in coaching those whose marks fell below her requirements. In her teaching of languages she endeavored to give a background of historical and social life of the country, whose language she taught, often sacrifcing time allotted to grammar and rhetoric to a talk on social customs or some event in Spain, Mexico or Germany. Thus she taught not merely a language but gave that language an interest and life. In her classes, too, Miss Wolfenden spared no pains, and missed no opportunity to teach courtesy and consideration.

Y. M. L. Will Hold Social Dance Tomorrow Night

Redwood Council Y. M. I. will hold a dance in the Foresters hall Saturday evening. A permit for the dance was secured at the meeting of the city council Monday evening. Markgraph's orchestra will furnish the music.

South Redwood City Residents Protest Road Improvement

A petition of protest signed by 95 residents of the South Redwood district was presented to the city council Monday evening in protest to the proposed improvement of Woodside road. The road was proposed to be improved and the cost made chargeable to an improvement district contiguous to the road. The protest stated that the people of the district were alreay heavily burdened with county and city taxes and improvement assessments. The petitioners asked that the proposed improvements be prosposed until such time as the district has increased in valuation so that the cost would not be great to the individual land holder.

FIRE DESTROYS BIG HAY BARN

A house and large hay barn on the Chestnut street property of A. S. Ligouri were destroyed yesterday afternoon by a fire whose origin is shrouded in mystery. In the barn was a quantity of baled hay belonging to Thomas Stewart and valued by him at $1000. This was completely destroyed. The house was occupied by Fred Denay, who was away at the time of the fire.

The fire which destroyed the house and barn was the fourth to be discovered within a week on the premises. Others were discovered on Sunday, Tuesday and Wednesday evening. All of these were seen and extinguished before any serious damage was done. Yesterday's fire, however, was well under way before it was seen, by the time an alarm was sent in and the firemen reached the scene of the blaze, the flames had destroyed the barn and a great part of the house.

A well on the property is operated by the town of Redwood City and was supplying 75,000 gallons of water a day to the city system. This well was temporarily put out of service by the fire. It is expected that it will again be in use, however, within a few days as little damage was done to the pump or motor. The control box was destroyed.

KIWANIANS VISIT BOY SCOUT CAMP

A group of members of the Redwood City Kiwanis Club and their friends paid a visit to the Boy Scout camp at San Mateo County Memorial Park last Friday evening. The party was taken in charge by Chief Camp Director Edward A. Barrer, who assisted by L. Q. Haven, Bert Werder, J. Rhoda and other scout leaders, took the Kiwanians on a tour of the camp. A dinner was served the group in the camp mess hall.

Later in the evening a huge bon fire was lighted in the camp's outdoor theatre and a program was enjoyed by Kiwanians and Scouts alike. The program consisted of several numbers by the Scouts, several numbers by Professor Herman Schnitzel and numbers by three Western Union Telegraph messengers from an Francisco. When the fire had burned sufficiently low to allow the shownig of moving pictures, several reals of pictures of Lindberg were shown by Dr. Herbert Clattenburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Sahlberg and family have returned from the Yosemite valley, where they spent their vacation of two weeks.

FLYING RULES PROTESTED BY AERO CLUBS

County Ordinance May Prevent Show Planned For Here

The recently passed ordinance of the board of supervisors, regulating aviation in this met with a protest Monda, the Pacific Aero Club of San isco. The club was represen the president, Edward J. M who appeared before the Monday morning and entered the protest of his colleagues.

Moffettt declared that the ordinance as passed by the board of supervisors recently was grossly unfair to many skilled aviators. The provision that in order to secure a license an aviator must have been in the air for at least 50 hours during the last six months would exclude many aviators who have many hundreds of hours flying time to their credit, but who have not been flying much recently.

The Pacific Aero Club was planning a big three-day aviation pageant in Redwood City in the near future. Many of the pioneer aviators of the state were to take part and many of the early types of machines were to have been exhibited and flown. The county ordinance would eliminate both the use of and the machines of many of the old-time aviators.

The matter was taken under consideration by the board of supervisors and will be considered at a later meeting.

MIDNIGHT RIDE ENDS IN CRASH

A midnight ride ended suddenly at the intersection of Jefferson street and the highway early Thursday morning for Edgar Kief, son of Mrs. Ada Loucks of this city Young Kief was riding on the running board of a small car driven by Bruce Moore, who was crossing the highway toward the west. As Moore drove onto the highway his car collided with one driven by A. Saerenas, an employe of the Menlo Country Club.

The car driven by Moore was completely wrecked and Saerenas' car after the crash was thrown through a fence into the vacant lot which forms the corner of this intersection and finally came to a stop against the house of City Clerk W. A. Price.

Kief was thrown from the running board and suffered severe injuries to one leg. He was attended by Dr. H. C. Clattenburg and was later removed to the Mills Memorial hospital in San Mateo, suffering greatly from the injuries he sustained.

The crash was investigated by Officers Douglas, Snider and Fitzgerald. The car driven by Moore was found to be registered not in his name but that of a party in Iowa. The police secured the names of a number of witnesses to the crash.

RLANNING COMMISSION REAPPOINTED BY BOARD

Five members of the Redwood City Planning Comission were reappointed Monday evening by the city council for terms of varying lengths. The reappointment of members of the commission was made necessary by a law recently passed by the state legislature, giving the planning commissions a different status than heretofore held. In order to comply with the law the members of the old planning commission resigned and were reappointed under the new law.

The members of the commission appointed Monday evening and the terms for which they were appointed were: C. M. Doxsee, 6 years; Dan Stafford, 2 years. An-Gill, 4 years; Elward Allen, 3 years; Dan Stafford, 2 years. Another member of the commission will be appointed later. The other members of the commission who hold office by reason of their official capacities are Mayor Beeger, City Attorney Mansfield and City Engineer Dimmitt.

Enrico Raggio of San Francisco was fined $25 in the court of Justice of the Peace Edward McAulice this week for catching undersize abalones. Raggio was arrested by Game Warden Jack Burke, when he was found with several abalones in his possession less than the required seven inches in length.

LEGISLATURE IS TOPIC OF EXCHANGE CLUB ADDRESS

The "workings" of the State Legislature formed the topic of an address before members of the Redwood City Exchange Club Tuesday evening. The speaker was Harry Parkman, assemblyman from this district. Parkman outlined for the Exchangites the methods in which bills are passed through the two houses of the State Legislature at Sacramento. His talk was interesting and instructive. Joseph Baughn, manager of the ice company, was the chairman of the meeting.

The national convention of Exchange will be officially opened at Toledo on Monday by Miss Amelia Earhart, the first woman to fly across the Atlantic. Miss Earhart, has accepted the invitation to be present at the convention extended by Harold M. Harter, national secretary of the organization.

Y. M. I. LOSES TO HALE MOON BAY

By JOHN RRAN

As a result of Sunday's game at Halfmoon Bay the baseball team of Redwood Council, Y. M. I. is minus the County Y. M. I. championship and a perfectly good silver trophy.

Manager Al Bullivant's men left Redwood City thoroughly confident of their ability to defeat the Artichoke Growers and avenge their defeat in the first game of the series. If it were not for the presence of one, MacDougal, a mighty nifty pitcher, the local talent may have achieved their goal and forced the bay city outfit to play the deciding game on the Sequoia lot. The aforementioned MacDougal, imported from San Rafael to do the dirty work, assumed the pitching job for Halfmoon in the fifth inning, and when he did so Redwood's chances already wobbly, disappered entirely.

In the four innings he pitched, MacDougal struck out six men and allowed no hits.

"Tick" Hallett, Bullivant's chucker tried desperately to check the Halfmoon attack but was driven to the showers under a barrage of base hits in the fourth. "Brick" Allain, fiery topped shortstop, replaced Hallett on the Mound. Allain made a creditable showing in the box but lacked support from the field.

Redwood made its strongest bid or victory in the fifth inning, when four hits were converted into four runs. Herm started it off with a double, Brook walked, and Lawlor fanned. Johnson, doubled to score Herm, and Hallett's long triple sent Johnson and Brook homeward. Stevens singled to drive Hallett in and end the inning fireworks.

Bartolomei, Hallett and Johnson each with two hits led the Redwood Council artillery, while Betencourt, holding down the hot corner or Halfmoon Bay led the day's hitting with three, a triple and two singles.

The score was Halfmoon Bay 10 Redwood City 6.

WESTERN PACIFIC STARTS WORK OF PENINSULA SURVEY

Crews Busy in Marshes Near Redwood City

ENGINEERING OFFICE OPENED

Secrecy Maintained Concerning Plans

Actual work preliminary to the presentation to the Interstate Commerce Commission of a request for a certificate of public benefit necessary to the construction of a railroad along the peninsula was begun this week by the Western Pacific, and is being rushed with all possible dispatch. Engineering crews with headquarters in South San Francisco are making a survey of the entire bay frontage of this county, ploting a route for the proposed line from Redwood City to San Francisco.

The Western Pacific has opened an engineering office in the Bank of South San Francisco, where plans for the route are being prepared from data secured by the crews which are working along the marshes of the bay shore

It was stated this week that the preliminary surveys may be completed within a month. If this is so the application to the interstate commerce commission will be made as soon after that as possible. It is estimated that the actual work on the road bed for the new line between this city and San Francisco may be begun within the next six fonths.

The link of the new road which will connect this city with San Francisco will be the first to be built in the thirteen million dollar expansion program of the Western Pacific. It will place that line in direct competition with the Southern Pacific in the passenger and freight carrying business on the peninsula. Later the line will be extended to meet the transcontinental line of the Western Pacific at Niles, and will then be continued through the San Joaquin valley to Bakersfield.

The report that the proposed extension of the Western Pacific lines will result in a rail war between the Western and Southern Pacific lines has been denied by President Harry M. Adams of the former company. The Western Pacific, he stated, will devote its efforts to the development of the peninsula and to giving service to the rich agricultural sections of tht San Joaquin. The extension of the Western Pacific into Los Angeles has not been contemplated, he stated.

No definite announcements have been made by the Wtstern Pacific as to the route which their rails will follow from San Francisco to Redwood City, except that they will follow the bay shore. It is thought likely, however, that the company may secure the 100 foot rigt of way through the marsh lands of the Tacoma Mill Company, which would bring the line into Redwood City near the lower end of Chestnut street and would connect with a right of way secured by the company recently across the Sweeny ranch to a point on the bay between the Southern Pacific railway bridge and the Dumbarton vehicular bridge. Here, it is believed, the company will construct another railway bridge to carry their line into Niles, where it will meet the present line to San Jose.

It is said that the company contemplates constructing the new bridge over the bay at Cooley Landing at the terminus of the Bay road and that the proposed road will parallel the Bay road, commencing at Menalto Park and running past that property to the landing.

SAN MATEO GIRL IN FILMS HERE

The leading lady in "Wheels of Chance" to be shown at the Sequoia theatre on Monday and Tuesday evenings is a San Mateo girl and well known on the peninsula. Miss Lena Basquette plays opposite Richard Barthelmess in this picture. Miss Basquette before entering the movies was a dancer of rare ability.

Even as a little girl Miss Basquette was a gifted dancer. One of her first public appearances was in this city on May Day 1914 at a celebration and balloon assention held at the ball park, now the Perry addition. Many friends of the talented little actress are awaiting her picture here with interest.

Mr. and Mrs. William Lipp are planning to leave tomorrow for a motor trip to Salt Lake City and to the Yellowstone.

ABALONE HUNTER FINED FOR UNDERSIZE MOLUSKS

Catching abalones is an inexpensive sport all things considered. But even this may be overdone as Ben Barber of San Francisco learned Wednesday. Barber was arrested by Game Warden Jack Burke, near Pedro Point with almost six times the limit of abalones in his possession, and all of them undersize. Barber was found by the game warden carefully hiding the abalones beneath a rick and still looking for more. When placed under arrest he is alleged to ave offered the officer $25 to let him go.

Taking all of these circumstances into account Justice of the Peace McAuliffe fined Barber $100 on each of two counts. One of having more than the legal limit of ten abalones and the other for having undersize abalones in his possession. The fines were levied so soon that the abalones were replaced in the ocean while still alive.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Demands of California anti-vivisectionalists for the ousting of Dr. Wilbur Selle, physiology instructor at the Santa Barbara State Teachers' College, on charges of cruelty to animals, were disclosed last week at the Governor's office. Governor Young has received fifty or more communications, it was announced, asking immediate dismissal of Dr. Selle on the allegation that he recently performed experimental operations on a small dog and then left the wounded animal tied up in a garage.

Throwing down the gauntlet of competition to existing railroad systems the Western Pacific Railroad a few days ago announced far-reaching transportation plans involving $13,500,000 and affecting San Francisco and peninsula traffic. Through a subsidiary, the Western Pacific California Railroad Company, the transportation system will gain a new all-rail entrance to San Francisco for its transcontinental system and become an active competitor in the peninsula traffic.

Tax collections for the fiscal year 1928 decreased $74,776,244.29 under 1927, the Treasury Department announced a few days ago at Washington. More than half of the loss was from income taxes, which fell off $45,456,965.92, income tax collections for 1928 being $2,174,496,477.80, against $2,219,952,433.72 for 1927. Receipts from miscellaneous taxes also showed a decrease to the extent of $29,320,278.37. California's income tax was $114,189,324.83, and collections $137,232,419.65.

Unless California and visiting tourists want to undergo the embarrassment of reloading their camp equipment at the roadside they will keep the loads placed on car running boards within the limits prescribed by law, Frank G. Snook, chief of the State division of motor vehicles, declared last week. Snook has issued orders to his traffic officers to enforce the law setting the hub cap line as the limit width for loads on the left running boards and six inches as the limit width for loads on the right side.

California's permanent automobile license plate color combination will be black and orange, the same colors selected for the 1929 plates. This is the announcement by A. R. Heron, State director of finance, of whose department the State motor vehicle department is a division. In each succeeding year, he said, the colors will be reversed. While the color combination for 1929 will be a black background with orange letters, in 1930 it will be an orange background with black letters. California will alternate in its colors with New York, which has the same color combination and practically an identical style of plate.

State Treasurer Charles G. Johnson reports earnings of $6,855,236 in interest on State money deposited with banks throughout California during the last five years. This was declared to be $4,270,527.77 in excess of similar interest earnings during any like period in the history of the State Treasury. "California receives the highest rate of interest on its idle money of any State in the Union," says the announcement. In addition to the interest revenues obtained, idle funds are of tremendous value to the agricultural and industries activities throughout the State, the money being deposited in 463 banks in every section of California.

Estimates made by county clerks to Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan indicate the registration for the August 28th primary election in California will set a new record. Charles Hagerty, election statistician in Jordan's office, announced a few days ago that the registration is expected to reach 2,057,600, the figure fixed by the county clerks in ordering booklets containing the declarations of candidacy and the sponsor lists for the primary. The registration for the primary election in 1926 totaled 1,854,471 and that for the general election in the same year was 1,912,862. Registration for the August primary closes July 28th.

More than $25,000,000 has been advanced to California veterans of the World War for the purchase of homes and farms by the State veterans' welfare board during the past six years. This is shown in figures announced a few days ago by George M. Stout, secretary of the board. Actual investments to the end of the fiscal year on June 30th amounted to $24,447,998.04. In addition, there are other loans aggregating $1,000,000 which have been approved by the board but which are being held in escrow awaiting the completion of buildings or other details connected with the transactions. At the present time there are 5,167 veterans actually holding contracts with the veterans' boards for the purchase of homes and farms.

California's unemployment problem is lessening, as it usually does in midsummer, but a statement issued a few days ago by the State Department of Industrial Relations declares that "many anxious to work in the industrial centers are without employment."

Aluminum or other bright metal automobile license plate holders have come under the disapproval of the State Motor Vehicle Department. Frank G. Snook holds that these lower visibility of the number on the plates. Black plate holders or others of a neutral color will be approved, he said.

If your license to operate a motor vehicle has been revoked for any cause and you drive a car before it has been restored you may go to jail. This is the announcement by the State Motor Vehicle Department, which cites the penalty of five to ninety days in jail without the alternative of a fine. It also is announced that the maximum penalty will be sought. Officers operating in counties throughout the State will be furnished with lists of persons whose licenses have been revoked, with instructions to see that they do not drive until the legal revocation period expires.

Murray Hulbert of New York City was unanimously elected grand exalted ruler at the sixty-fourth annual convention of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks held at Miami last week. Los Angeles was favorably mentioned as the site of the 1929 convention.

California flappers are getting nicer every day. Though there was a general increase in crime in California during the fiscal year which ended June 30, only 53 girls of flapper age were arrested. And the year before 308 of them were taken to jail. State Bureau of Criminal Identification announced last week that there were 40,938 arrests for felonies and high misdemeanors during the twelve months, an increase of 9,064 over the previous year. While flappers were getting better, "day by day in every way," 7,354 male juveniles were placed in custody, as compared with only 5,525 the year before.

California produced more than fifty different mineral substances during the last year, the value of this mining output totaling approximately $377,205,000, the State division of mines and mining announced recently. For the first time in the State's history, titanium minerals were produced in commercial quantities. Titanium, said the statement, is used in alloys of steel, in paint employed for protecting iron and steel and is also valuable in the dyeing industry. There was, however, no production during the year of the following substances, once on the active list in California: Tin, asbestos, arsenic, bismuth, fluorspar, mica, molybdenum, serpentine, strantium and sulphur.

A gift to the people of California of 162 acres extending about a mile and a half along the shore of Lake Tahoe and including Rubicon Point was announced at the national conference on State Parks held last week in California by William E. Colby, chairman of the State Park Commission. This gift of land was made by William S. Bliss, Walter D. Bliss, and Miss Hope Bliss of San Francisco, through their attorney, Frand D. Stringham, formerly Mayor of Berkeley, owners of the property, in memory of their father, who was one of California's pioneers and whose name is closely associated with the early history of the shores of Lake Tahoe.

It's cheaper to live than to die—from the standpoint of California, with an $80,000,000 automobile accident bill to face yearly. Whether he bumps or is bumped by another car or merely watches the crash from the sidelines, the taxpayer's burden is around $16 per capita as the result of automobile accidents. This may seem high, but it is only a drop in the bucket compared with the yearly statement handed Uncle Sam, calling for payment of from $600,000,000 to $700,000,000. Each fatal injury represents a potential cash loss of $5000 to the commonwealth of this State, statisticians estimate, while each non-fatal injury weakens the financial structure by $175.

California's first serious attempt at rehabilitation of narcotic drug addicts began a few days ago. The State Narcotic Hospital officially opened its doors at Pacific Lodge, near Pomona, Los Angeles county, and final arrangements were being made for handling the first patients. Dr. Thomas F. Joyce, medical superintendent of the new hospital, is now touring State institutions to select inmates addicted to narcotics who will be transfered to Southern California for treatment. The first group of patients will number approximately fifty.

An "asbestos" covering for the foothills of California to eliminate the menace of brush fires is a possibility. This declaration is made on the authority of Fire Chief Ralph Scott of Los Angeles, who witnessed the tests of a new plant importation at the California botanic garden at Mandevfile Canyon last week. While the plant is not exactly composed on the order of asbestos, plant scientists convinced Chief Scott that it is equally as effective as far as its non-burning qualities are concerned. Newly arrived from South Africa, the asbestos plant answers to the formal name of portulacetrum and thrives on arid slopes, which makes it particularly well adapted for introduction to the foothills of southern California.

Recommendations that the annual pension for retired public school teachers be raised to a figure somewhere between $600 and $900, will be presented to the 1929 Legislature. This was announced recently by Alexander R. Heron, State director of finance and chairman of the State Teachers' Retirement Salary Fund Commission. Teachers now receive a pension of $500 a year after completing 30 years of service. The money comes from their own contributions and inheritance tax collections. A law change is also contemplated, Heron said, to refund the money of teachers who contribute toward the State Pension Fund and then quit teaching before qualifying for retirement compensation.

Either California has been visited during the past year by a surplus of criminals, or the peace officers have exercised extraordinary diligence in apprehending those the State already has. For figures released last week by Clarence S. Morrill, superintendent of the State bureau of criminal identification, show that for the fiscal year ending June 30th, California had 9,057 more arrests than for a corresponding period the year preceding. Arrests for the twelve-month period totaled 40,931, against 31,874 for the fiscal year closing June 30, 1927.

Prizefighting will be outlawed in California at the November election. This belief was expressed a few days ago by Charles A. Whitmore, private secretary to Governor C. C. Young. He made the prediction in announcing Governor Young's acceptance of the resignation of Seth W. P. Strelinger, Beverly Hills member of the State Athletic Commission. Strelinger's appointment to the Athletic Commission, created to regulate prizefighting in the State made by former Governor Richardson. His resignation becomes effective immediately, though his term runs until January 1, 1930.

FARM POULTRY

GROWING PULLETS NEED EVERY CARE

The young growing pullets need every advantage because the profits from them this fall will depend largely on their growth and maturity.

"There are four essentials in developing young pullets," says C. F. Parrish, extension poultryman at the North Carolina State college. "First give them a good range on ground not occupied by the hens nor where mature stock has been kept, supply plenty of fresh air in the poultry house, give them sufficient growing mash and scratch feed and see that shade and green feed is available. From the green feed, the pullets get certain food elements and iron which is essential. If natural shade is not available an artificial shade may be made by driving four stakes in the ground and covering them with sacks. Sunflowers or corn may also be planted to supply this necessity."

For those young pullets still in the brooder house, the heat should be decreased as fast as possible and the house ventilated. The stove should remain in the house for at least two weeks after the fire is out to use in case of cold rains. Feed the scratch grain farther away from the house each day so the birds will go out and eat more green feed.

For roosting, Mr. Parrish advises the placing of temporary perch poles in the brooder house when the chicks are about seven to nine weeks old and do not need heat. These poles should be about fifteen inches from the floor and slanting at an angle of 45 degrees. One-inch mesh wire might be used in front of the poles to make the birds climb up.

Egg That Has Life Very Essential for Success

Whether breeding chickens, ducks, geese or turkeys, the first essential for success is to get an egg that has life. Strong, vigorous parents that are well fed and well cared for produce such eggs. The general principles of breeding apply to all poultry, says a writer in Wallace's Farmer. Well fed, but not overfat, is the ideal condition. Enough feed to keep the flock active during the day; a liberal feed at night. Green feed and animal feed, clean water, no lice or mites; fresh air without draft at night, together with plenty of room, are conditions that favor eggs with life in any locality. There are no rules for growing poultry that must be followed absolutely. There are the general principles of clean food in abundance with work on the part of the fowl to get it; clean houses, clean yards and fresh air, but success comes with about as many different systems as there are breeders. Bone meal, meat scraps and buttermilk furnish bone and muscle building material; corn, wheat and oats add the necessary fat and energy; green feeds give life and health. Upon the character of the seed depends the harvest.

Light Brahmas Good for the Small-Patch Farmer

The lower your fences are, the heavier may be your breeds of poultry. One of the best breeds for the small-patch farmer, or the business man or wage earner living in the suburbs—the man who cannot afford to put much money into expensive wire netting—is the Light Brahmas. They stand confinement in narrow quarters, and they also stand cold weather. They are less subject to disease than some of the other breeds; they make good layers, and average in weight, when fully grown, about 11 pounds; so when you market your surplus stock you have something to sell. But if you have plenty of space for your chickens the cheapest breeds are the nervous, restless ones, which means that they are good foragers for food, and will not need much feeding. The Brown or White Leghorn and the Black Spanish are among the best foragers. Other breed which do well in the small patch or acre lot are the Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes and Rhode Island Reds.

Chickens Eat Feathers

Chickens eat their own feathers because of the lack of the following feeds: 1, meat; 2, green food or bulk; 3, salt. One-half pound of fine table salt should be put in the dry mash, and this should be kept before the hens at all times. They should get plenty of green food. In the winter time, cabbage, mangels and root crops answer fairly well. They should have plenty of animal food such as beef scraps, fish scraps, skim milk or buttermilk.

Alfalfa Is Favored

If time is lacking to prepare green feed for chicks, it pays to buy high grade commercial alfalfa leaf meal. A few hundred pounds will furnish green feed for a lot of chicks. Many of the best chick starting mashes contain a little alfalfa meal. These mashes should be used according to the directions of the manufactures, but chicks on a starting mash containing alfalfa meal often seem to thrive without the other source of green feed. The cost is comparatively small.

Remedy for Lice

Lice live on the hens. When the fowls have free range they often keep these vermin checked by wallowing in the dust. A surer remedy is sodium fluosilicate—and here's an easy way to use it, which is recommended by the poultry folks, says the Farm Life. Simply mix one part of the sodium fluosilicate with three parts of fine road dust, and put in a box in the house where the hens can get into it. They'll soon be free of lice and happy and lay more eggs.

The stout gentleman rushing along the platform just missed his train, and returned puffing and blowing, to be greeted by a porter with the question:

"Missed your train, sir?"

"No," was the reply, "I didn't like the look of it, so I chased it off the platform!"

"No, that's wrong."

"Really? Then you can let me have the money?"

Daughter—Oh, no. Arthur says it's only just a tiny bit overdrawn!

Splendid Results in Good Health Campaign

No diphtheria deaths in 1927 puts Cambridge, Mass., at the head of the list in diphtheria prevention, of all the cities with populations more than 100,000 in the United States. Only once in the last five years, according to the American Medical association, has any city gone a year without a single death from diphtheria. The previous diphtheria record breaker was Duluth, Minn., in 1925. Seven cities with more than 100,000 inhabitants, had no typhoid deaths last year, the medical association's statistics show. New Haven, Conn.; Springfield, Mass.; Yonkers, N. Y.; Paterson, N. J.; Richmond, Va.; Canton, Ohio; Kansas City, Kan., make up the typhoid honor roll, which is the largest known since studies of typhoid death were started in 1913.

Fire Ball Caused Panic

Some of the children were so terrified that they injured themselves by rushing heedlessly against barbed-wire fences.

A Deserved Recognition

THE appointment by the federal judges of San Francisco of Thomas Sheridan as referee in bankruptcy for the San Francisco district to succeed A. B. Kreft, whose term had expired, is a recognition of ability and a reward of merit and loyalty. For the past seven years Mr. Sheridan has been the deputy United States District Attorney and was thus under the eyes of the judges who recognized his ability and energy in the prosecution of cases coming before the court. For seven years he has been the brains of the district attorney's office, being cosulted by his superiors in all important cases. He richly deserves the promotion that has been given to him. Mr. Sheridan is one of the cleverest lawyers in civil law in San Francisco, being a deligent student, and a stickler for preparation in handling difficult cases. The preparation of the big civil cases in the federal court during the past seven years was under his direction. Prior to securing his position with the federal government, Mr. Sheridan was associated with Senator S. M. Shortridge in the practice of law, the firm handling cases involving large sums of money. The appointment of the bankruptcy referee carries fees amounting to $15,000 a year.

Mr. Sheridan secured the plum, through his old friends and associate, Senator Shortridge, who knew his worth and ability through his long years of association with him.

Hoover's Memories of Peninsula

THE home coming of Herbert Hoover, the Republican standard bearer, today will be a big event in the history of the peninsula and in the life of the great man, who in all probability will be the next occupant of the White House. What a trend of thought will pass through the mind of the famous food administrator as he passes up University Avenue to his home on the campus, the scene of his youth, where unaided and with the handicap of poverty, he manfully and bravely struggled for an education, which education was to play such an important part in his after life. As he passes along familiar scenes his mind will revert to his early struggles at Stanford and to that eventful day he departed for his work in the mines at Grass Valley. Mr. Hoover now returns rich in honors and high in the esteem of his countrymen. He will revel in these thoughts and will offer up a prayer to Him on high for the privilege of being an American and as such given the opportunity to raise from such small beginnings to the highest position in the land. In no other country could this be done.

This same opportunity lies in the grasp of every American boy, who of course, possesses similiar ability and energy.

Mr. Hoover's pathway to his home will be lined with fellow citizens anxious to cheer and encourage the Republican nominee, who if elected president of the United States is to be the first chief excutive from the Golden State of California to rule in the White House. The great honor will be reflected to the peninsula, the home of the famous Commerce Secretary. The peninsula has a pardonable pride in giving Mr. Hoover to the nation, for in doing so, it feels that he will reflect credit upon it and upon the country by his acts of sound judgment, wisdom and constructive performance that will advance the public in every way and bring peace and prosperity to the whole people. This community is justly proud of its favorite son and on November will accord him a tremendous vote.

How About Registration

BIG things are ahead of the American people this year. Momentous decisions must be made; and the decisions will be made by the votes of the people who have registered and who vote at the approaching election. Will you be among those who vote? County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese reports that a large number of eligible citizens have not so far registered. This must be done by July 28th to enable the citizens to vote at the August primaries.

If every citizen of this county is not registered by that time it will be no fault of the county clerk. Everything is being done in this county to make it easy for every citizen to exercise his citizenship. Registrars are sent around from house to house. They are located at convenient points throughout the county, and ample notice has been given by both the county clerk and by the newspapers of the county of the requirements.

Good citizenship requires that you register and vote. If you have not registered by next Saturday you forfeit your privilege and have only yourself to blame.

THREE PARK TYPES TO BE CONSIDERED IN STATE PROGRAM

Six Million Bond To Be Voted On At November Election

STATE TO PAY HALF

Several Tracts On Tentative List

By CLEM WHITAKER

SACRAMENTO, July 19—If you like nature wild, with rugged peaks and unbroken wilderness, still free from highways and the smell of gasoline, California's new state park program will live up to your expectations.

If, on the other hand, you prefer nature wrapped in a veneer of civilization, with soft bed at night, dining room service by day, and grandeur easily accesible by fine paved roadways and carefully constructed hiking trails, you can have that, too.

The great state-wide park develement program planned under the $6,000,000 bond issue to be submitted to the voters in November is, in fact, a three-cornered plan, designed to cater to all classes of people, it was announced here today by Colonel Charles B. Wing, chief of the State Division of Parks, in outlining policies of the park board.

Here, roughly outlined, are the three "types" of parks planned as units of California's great playground system:

1. "Wilderness parks," virtually unimproved by man; great virgin tracts where man can "rough it," blaze his own trals and wander for days without seeing an automobile, a billboard, an auto camp, or a shack advertising chick en dinners for 49 cents.

2.—Beautiful, but somewhat "tamed" park areas, like California Redwood Park, easy access and with all the comforts of home, where man can commune with nature without the discomfort of stiff joints, or stripping his gears.

3—Beach tracts that will further the "Save the Beaches" program and provide a playground for the whole family, with the prospect that these will be particularly popular with children.

Illustrating the "types" of areas being considered for the so-called "wilderness parks," Col. Wing declared that one proposed for this group by Riverside County boosters would include Mt. San Jacinto, an untamed wilderness, where the hardy explorer can look down for 8,000 feet into Imperial Valley at ose point, with an almost sheer drop of 11,000 feet from the peak itself. Sponsors of this park would also have the ton Sea, 200 feet below sea level, state secure a frontage on the Sal- and a strip connecting with the Mt. Jacinto area.

"Trinity Peaks," in the far north, is proposed by many as another "wildnerness" to come under state control and furnish a playground for the person who wants to leave all traces of urban life far behind. Fishing and all other types of out-door recreation will be allowed in the state park, except hunting, Col. Wing said.

The park survey, being directed by Frederick Law Olmsted, noted landscape architect, to aid the park board in selecting sites, is well underway, according to Col. Wing, and Olmsted's recommendations will be submitted before January 1. He has made a personal inspection of many of the sites proposed in Southern California and is scheduled to make an inspection tour in Northern California during the coming month.

Insofar as possible, it will be the policy of the board to make the state park selfsustaining, Col Wing declared, after the policy in effect at California Redwood Park. Sponsors of each park area, if it is approved for the inclusion in the state system, must also match, dollar -for-dollar, the state's investment. Col. Wing declared that more than $1,000,000 already has been assured from private sources to supplement the $6,000,000 bond issue, in the event the bonds are voted by the people.

BARBERS WARNED THAT TIME WANES TO SECURE LICENSE

Penalties Provided For Those Who Wait Beyond Sept. 1

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, July17—Redwood City barbers were warned today by C. E. Rynearson, secretary of the State Board of Barber Examiners, that they must renew their licenses for the new fiscal year before the end of this month.

The renewal date expires August 1, Rynearson declared in his warning, and members of the craft who have not secured their licenses by that time will be required to hang up their shears and razors until they comply with the law. Penalties are provided for all delinquent barbers, whose applications do not reach the state board within a month after expiration of the renewal date, or Sptember 1.

Only 500 of the 17,772 barbers licensed last year have made application thus far for their new licenses, according to Rynearson, despite the fact that only about two weeks remain in which to secure the 1928-29 permits.

PRATT-LOW CANNERY BEGINS PEACH PACK

The local plant of the Pratt-Low Preserving Co. began operations yesterday for the annual canning season. The cannery began work with 700 employees. The apricot crop was poor this year, Manager Gibson stated yesterday, and for thas reason no apricots were packed at the plant here. The cannery is now working on peaches which will be followed by pears. An exceptionally large pack of peaches will be made, exceeding in quantity any of previous years.

Thomas Newhall Dies In Fresno

Thomas . Newhall, a former pioner resident of San Gregorio, passed away in San Francisco last Friday, following a long illness. He was 84 years old at the time of his death. In the seventies the deceased owned a large tract of land adjoining the Quentin ranch, now the Ross holding, at San Gregorio, which he sold in 1886 and moved to Fresno, where he amassed a large fortune in grape and fruit lands. It is said he leaves an estate valued at half a million dollars.

In the early days Newell used to attend dances in Redwood City and in those days was a pal of P. P. Chamberlain. Both men were sure to be at every party or social in the county.

David Cosgrove, the widely-known attorney, was an old friend of the deceased, having became acquainted with him many years ago at Fresno, when the latter was the justice of the peace in the raisin city. Mr. Cosgrove leaves next week for Fresno to probate the will of his late friend and former client.

MENLO PARK

The town council met in regular session Tuesday night with all the members present Mayor Weeden invited Father Doyle, business manager of St. Patrick's Seminary, to address the council in reference to the annexation of Menlo Oaks and to give his consent to taking in a strip of land lying contiguous to the property sought to be annexed. Before addressing the board by Father Doyle, City Attorney Whitworth outlined the plan of annexation and interpreted the law upon the subject. Father Doyle stated that he was told the question was only a real estate scheme and that the bonafide property owners were not in favor of the move and therefor at first blush he was antagonistic, but on hearing to explanation of the city attorney, his view were somewhat changed and that he would take up the matter with the archbishop who was always in favor of development. He would look into the matter and see what benefits would accrue to that section. He agreed to advise the council by July 24.

L. T. Diebles, leader of the proponnts of annexation, spoke at length on the question giving a vivid account of the benefits to be derived from such annexation. Mayor Weeden stated that he had talked with Mr. Hopkins since the adjournment of the council last week and he agreed to give a strip of his estate fronting on the Middlefield road, providing St. Patrick's Seminary would give the six ares on the opposite side of the street. Blake moved that the matter go over until such time as Father Doyle would make his report. The council took this view of the question and the matter went over until next week.

The report of the city planning commission together with maps and charts was presented by the chairman, Fred Metcalf, and same was accepted by the council and a public meeting was called for Friday evening, July 20 at 8 p. m., when the tentative zoning ordinance will be discussed at length by all concerned.

The ordinance keeping minors off the street for the safety and dignity of the public was adopted as read. The ordinance prohibiting the exploding and sale of firecrackers within the city limits was also adopted and passed. The other ordinance passed and adoped was the prohibiting of loiters on the street at unseeming hours. The ordinance prohibiting the discharge of firearms within the city limits was adopted.

the council adjourned to Tuesday evening, July 24.

City Board Accedes To Petitioners in Zoning Law Change

At the request of the Redwood City District Real Estate Board presented at the meeting of the city council Monday evening, that body instructed the city attorney to prepare a change in the city zoning ordinance in order that a piece of property at the corner of Jefferson avenue and Railroad avenue might be placed in the light industrial zone. The petioner for the change was Thomas Nelson who desired to erect a laundry at this location.

Nelson's petition was presented several weeks ago to the board but failed to receive favorable action by the board after A. M. Robertson, owner of an adjoining piece of property had filed a protest to the change.

The motion that the status of the property be changed was made by Councilman Dearborn and was seconded by Councilman Thorning.

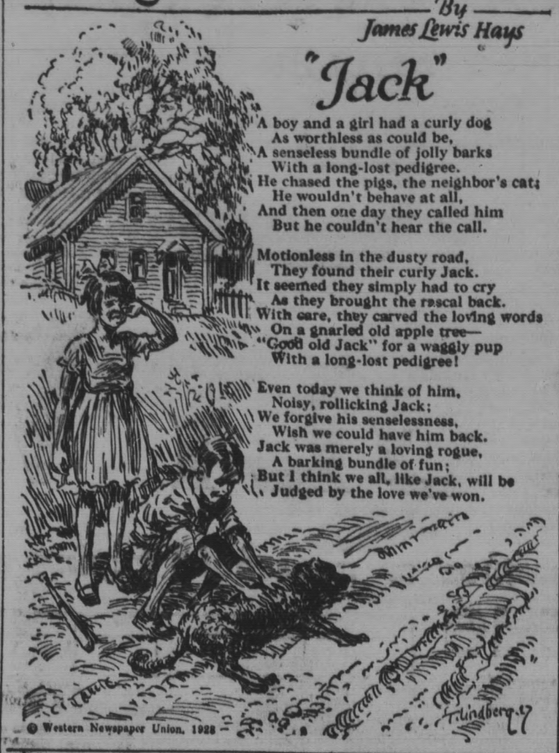
Songs of Plain Folks

By James Lewis Hays

"Jack"



A boy and a girl had a curly dog
As worthless as could be,
A senseless bundle of jolly barks
With a long-lost pedigree.
He chased the pigs, the neighbor's cat;
He wouldn't behave at all,
And then one day they called him
But he couldn't hear the call.

Motionless in the dusty road,
They found their curly Jack.
It seemed they simply had to cry
As they brought the rascal back.
With care, they carved the loving words
On a gnarled old apple tree—
"Good old Jack" for a waggly pup
With a long-lost pedigree!

Even today we think of him,
Noisy, rollicking Jack;
We forgive his senselessness,
Wish we could have him back.
Jack was merely a loving rogue,
A barking bundle of fun;
But I think we all, like Jack, will be Judged by the love we've won.

BIG VOTE FORECAST AT AUG. ELECTION FOR CALIFORNIA

Estimated Vote For County Is 30,000 INTEREST SHOWN

By LAWRENCE MONFORT
Staff Correspondent

SACRAMENTO, July 18 — Whether his name be Hoover or Smith, the United States next president is going to draw a record-breaking vote in California, November 6.

Clerks of the state's 58 counties estimate the prmary vote at 2,050,100, and State Electon Statistcian Charles Hagarty adds 7,900 to this total for safety's sake.

Total for the state on a basis of county clerks' estimates were announced today by Hagarty simultaneously with placing of an order for 2,057,600 booklets containing lists of candidates, their declarations of candidacies and lists of their sponsors with the state printer.

Of these books San Mateo county will receive 30,000 that being the number estimated by the county clerk as needed to place one copy in the hand of each voter, irrespective of party.

Hagarty announced a generous increase in this year's primary vote estimate over the total registration for the primary in 1926, only 1,854,471 citizens of all political persuasions being entitled to vote on that occasion. In the general election in 1926, 1,912,862 votes were cast.

This being a presidential year with prospects of a keen contest on national issues as well as in many assembly and senate districts, Hagarty declared that a much larger general election vote might be expected this fall than ever before. While he was unwilling to make a prediction he pointed out that seasoned political veterans already have estimated the California general election vote as in excess of 2,250,000.

LARGE SUMS SPENT IN STATE WAR ON INFECTIOUS ILLS

San Mateo County Gives $130,871.35 To Fight Disease

PREVENTION BEST

Good Water Supply Essential Element

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, July 19 —"Every day in every way California is growing better and better" it appears today with some $3,005,698 spent last year by te counties in keeping their people well.

Believing it is better to stay well than to have to fight pain and disease after it fastens its grip on one, county officials are taking increased precautions to prevent the inroads of infectious and contagious maladies, it is apparent from the compilation of county expenditures just reported to Dr. Walter M. Dickie, state drector of health.

San Mateo county has bent every effort to keep her citizens in "good health." For instance in this county's campaign to keep fit a grand total of $130,871.35 was expended during the past year in the conservation of public health.

The employment of a county public health nurse or nurses is one of the best helath insurance a community can subscribe to, according to Dr. Dickie.

The outlawing of typhoid fever is pointed out by the health director as one of the great victories in the recent state war on germs and disease.

A good water supply and a modern sewage system are also two essentials of public health and cleanliness emphasized by Dickie.

FINES DECREASE IN STATE COURTS DURING PAST YEAR

San Mateo County Fines For Year Show Marked Slump

By ESTO BROUGHTON
(StaffCorrespondent)

SACRAMENTO, July 18—Finding it cheaper to be good the people of California apparently reformed last year, at least they cut their county bill for fines and penalties by over half a million, according to a report issued today by State Controller Ray L. Riley.

With a stiff bill of $2,074,190.18 for fines and penalties levied in the various county courts during the previous year, the citizens of California, it seems, slowed up speeding and bootlegging, at any rate, they reduced their overhead in judicial fines to $1,496.39.

In San Mateo county alone the annual amount of the fines collected dropped from $28,824.70 in 1926, to only $18,589.78 for the last year, the bulk of which was collected in the various justice of the peace courts throughout the county.

While the individual fine is usually not so large in the justice court it catches many more offnders than appear in the Superiod courts according to Riley, hence over two-thirds of the fines collected were assessed by those township judges.

A grand total of $1,050,209.07 was imposed in fines by the justices of the peace throughout the 58 counties, the controller reports, while only $142,053.10 was assessed in the Superior courts, but $8,525.74 in probation list with a total of $261,055.34.

Alpine was the only county to boast of having no citizens paying fines; while Los Angeles leads the list with a total of $261,0..5.34.

STATE REPORTS HAY AND GRAIN GOOD IN COUNTY

14,600 Acres of Tame Hay Here Reports Indicate

(By Capitol News Bureau)

SACRAMENTO, July 18—With a materially increased acreage of alfalfa, grain hay and miscellaneous tame hay as compared with last year, California livestock men have the prospect of better than normal feeding conditions for their stock during 1928, G. H. Hecke, state director of agriculture, reported today.

The condition of pasturage in San Mateo county Hecke reported as 88. There are 14,600 acres of tame hay tin that county he said.

Exceeding the 1927 acreage by 21,000 acres the crop of alfalfalfa totals 1,011,000 acres, grain hay 557,000 acres and miscellaneous tame hay 102,000 acres, or a total of 1,670,000, Hecke announced in his state summary.

While range and pasture deteriorated somewhat in June due to continued general dry weather and seasonal conditions, the condition of tame hay was placed at 88 per cent, or one point above the ten-year average.

Hecke reported the condition of cattle and calves at 91 percent of normal, while sheep and lambs were reported at 92 per cent.

The Colfax Bookplate

By AGNES MILLER

WNU Service
© by The Century Co.

"I cabled to England for some information; in fact, I did so on Tuesday, the day after you first showed me the bookplate." He drew from his pocket a blue half-sheet of paper, and handed it to me. "Just to make a beginning," he went on, "I assumed, from the medical bookplate, and from the frigate, that Colfax might have had some customer who had dealings with ships or doctors. So I cabled my secretary to find out what he could for me; that's his answer."

I read the cablegram:

"Made thorough Colfax investigation stop family died out eighteen sixty-nine stop last member Richard Colfax son of Hugh eighteen hundred eighteen sixty-nine stop served Chile Dardanelles Crimea stop no medical connection among family or clientele."

"History's always to be taken into account in studying bookplates, of course," I agreed. "I am aware there was a Crimean war; I have even heard of the British fleet passing the Dardanelles in 1848. But I must betray my ignorance as to when Great Britain was at war with Chile."

The captain most politely refused the opportunity presented to him to smile.

"She never was," he rejoined. "I believe, though, that a British fleet went to the aid of Chile when that country revolted from Spain."

"Then," said I, a little surer of my ground, but not quite ready to quote exact dates, "since those South American countries revolted in the early part of the Nineteenth century, that was just about the time, too, when Richard Colfax was beginning his naval career, if he entered the service in 1818. Suppose he served in that fleet you mention, suppose he made some sort of connection in this hemisphere: what about some ground in that event, for there being an original American Colfax bookplate?"

"That's just what I surmised! I wanted to see if you'd confirm it," cried the captain, delighted. "Even if it's South American and not North, the point's worth looking into, and I'll do that at once."

A rapid search through reference catalogues revealed that Clarthew's "Notes" had been issued in an edition of three hundred numbered copies. The number of our copy, which appeared on the title page, was 239. But so far as I could go back in sales reports, a thorough search brought no trace whatever of Number 239.

However, this fact proved one thing, at least: Number 239 had very seldom changed hands. It had belonged to Judge Leavitt. Then why were the Grosvenor family so resolved to get possession of it? For the key? Was that connected with Charles MacIvor's offer of a "liberal settlement," the night before? Did he know of some treasure hidden under lock and key, to which he alluded? But why should a key belonging to the Grosvenor connection be concealed in a law book? There were no lawyers in that family.

No, there were not. And then, as I reread its title for perhaps the five hundredth time in the last six days, I suddenly got an idea. This title was: "Notes on Medical Statutes in the Virginia Code." And Mr. Grosvenor's father had been a doctor; a Virginian; he had practiced at a time when he would need just such a professional reference book; and the bookplate, real or counterfeit, was a physician's bookplate!

I nearly shot out of my chair and addressed the meeting—customers, browsers, clerks, collectors, all: "There you are, folks! Just give me time; I don't need eternity, after all," when suddenly my joyful emotions were cut and all stricken with paralysis. For Mr. Case, who had hardly appeared in the shop all morning, though usually on Saturdays he was nowhere else, was just going past me out of the front door.

His pace was so quiet that it seemed almost stealthy. He passed within a yard of me, and did not notice me; I never had seen any face so terribly distraught as his. What in the world had happened to him now? Or what had he done now? I felt more upset, actually, than when I had seen him at my desk Thursday night; for now it would have been impossible not to pity him, whatever one's suspicions.

CHAPTER X

Shocks, Assorted.

I dispatched Captain Ashland a note as the clock began to strike noon; as it finished, in walked Mr. Almy, looking even more alive than ever. But before he had shut the door, the telephone rang.

"Yes, Mr. Roberts," said I. "Yes, that is correct. It has turned up. It is here. Yes, details will be available when I see you. Wh-h-hat? Oh, certainly. Wait, Mr. Almy, please! Yes, yes, I understand; I will do so. What earthly difference could it make to me? All right."

I hung up.

"Mr. Roberts has just inquired if you have arrived," I said to Mr. Almy with outward calm, inwardly I felt sudder than a hornet, and dreadfully fat, owing to a birthful message just transmitted by Mr. Roberts. "He would like to see you at once in Mr Case's office—"

"I'll ask him if we may have it."

"You needn't bother; he has gone on."

"Gone out?"

"Yes, just a few minutes ago. And if you so desire, Mr. Roberts suggests my joining the two of you there later."

"Very well. We may have quite a session. I should be glad if you'd come as soon as you can, please."

Mr. Almy nodded and passed on. Then I took my bag, and from it I took Clarthew's "Notes," and from that I took the key. The bookplate and the key I then returned to the bag. I next rose and at random snatched—for I was growing less calm—a file of prints from one of the shelves near my desk, and ran through it searching for some mediocre bookplate of small value. A laurel wreath encircling a helmet with a Navarre-like plume boiling off one side and the inspiring motto INVICTUS, rather pleased my mood. I swept the pastebrush across it, and slammed it down on the first inside cover of the law book, entirely covering the marks of the original bookplate and the hiding place of the key.

Such, indeed, had just been my orders from Mr. Roberts. And their purpose? None other than to prepare the book for the hands of Miss Wilkes! For she would shortly appear to demand it. Mr. Darrow had been reached by her plea, and had viewed the offer of her cousin Magistrate Juddes with favor. And I was to be the agent to deliver the prize to her. Mr. Roberts had even chuckled about it. Well, here she came. I could hear icicles swaying in the gale.

"Oh, Miss Wilkes," I cried before she was half-way up the aisle, "isn't it perfectly glorious! You know what I mean." I waved the book coyly. "Sh-h-h!" I tucked it into her hand.

The icicles were slightly less audible, Miss Wilkes' majestic countenance proclaimed that while she had much to forgive, she could afford to be magnanimous, if it was not, indeed, her duty.

"Now, you'd be the last person on earth to find fault with anyone for being overconscientious," I suggested blandly.

"Especially," responded Miss Wilkes, interpreting this remark as she was intended to, "one of my own 'graduates,' as I call them. Well, by-by! Be good to yourself!"

"The same to you!" said I, feeling certain my wish would be fulfilled, and picking up my bag, I went to join Mr. Almy and Mr. Roberts at the rear.

"May we have the key and the bookplate, please, Miss Fuller," requested Mr. Almy, without preliminaries.

"Oh, do you know all about them!" I exclaimed, producing them.

"He knows what you told me yesterday," said Mr. Roberts. "And how did the lost book come to light again?"

I smiled, and both men, who were extremely serious, looked surprised.

"Perhaps," I began, "Mr. Almy has told you he met me in Miss Grosvenor's apartment last night? I had gone to stay with Miss Burton. The saving feature of the occasion, in a double sense, was Miss Burton herself. She stole that book!"

"Miss Burton stole that book!" ejaculated both Mr. Roberts and Mr. Almy, equally dumfounded.

I nodded.

"She took it at noon yesterday when my back was turned, to keep, as she thought, Miss Wilkes from getting it. Her brother had also warned her that 'Brandon Tower' had come to the shop, and she thought he wanted the book. You have heard of him, Mr. Almy?" He nodded without looking up from the bookplate. "And do you know he and Charles MacIvor are the same person?"

That time I certainly got an effect. Mr. Roberts bounded out of his chair and repeated my "Wh-h-HAT!" of a few minutes previous, while Mr. Almy laid down the bookplate and looked at me without moving a muscle. Then he said:

"Well, I thought so, but I was not certain. Thank you, Miss Fuller. How did you know?"

"Because Nancy Burton identified him. When Mr. MacIvor appeared through the window, she thought him Mr. Tower in search of the book and disappeared through the door to her own apartment. She hid the book under her mattress and went to sleep on top of it! She gave me the information when I came upstairs. But may I ask how you associated Mr MacIvor with Mr. Tower?"

"I suspected a connection, from the acount of Mr. Tower's efforts to get Miss Burton's, or rather Mr. Burton's, suitcase," replied Mr. Almy. "Most of this morning I spent trying to identify MacIvor with Tower, but without success, I admit, until your statement just now. MacIvor sent last night for his lawyer, Mr. Ballard and declined absolutely to talk. He has been formally charged with selling the stolen bonds, and is now out on bail. I tried to have Dibdin identify him as the law-student customer and also as the fellow Burton attacked here on Monday, but he couldn't do it. The passage of several days made him too uncertain."

"A Trigger?" I Echoed. "Dear Me, That Sounds Like a Gun."

"Why didn't you ask me to?" I demanded.

"You?"

"I can do it! After I had looked at him a few minutes last night in Normandy terrace, I recognized him, not only as that customer, but also as the man who came in here on Thursday night, whom I saw at my desk at a quarter-past ten, when I was standing up on the south gallery in the dark."

Mr. Almy pondered a minute in silence. Then he said:

"Well, as long as MacIvor was seen and identified here Thursday night, he'll have to come across with the rest of the story sooner or later. All you've told us is very unexpected and useful."

"I always felt Miss Burton to be rather an intelligent girl," observed Mr. Roberts, with his native tact.

"See here," broke in Mr. Almy, on this revised version, resuming his study of the bookplate, "the sixteen slits on this yellow slip do correspond to the slots on that cube in the picture, just as Miss Fuller noticed. I believe they could have been made by that instrument, for if I might venture a guess after looking at this very small picture, I should say there might be blades concealed inside it one for each cube . . . and what's this thing on top like a handle, anyhow? Is it a trigger, I wonder?"

"A trigger?" I echoed. "Dear me! that sounds like a gun. Now, I heard a gun last night—"

"Where?"

"In the Grosvenor apartment."

Mr. Almy pricked up his ears.

"Tell me about it," he ordered. "You didn't mention it before. Why not?"

"It passed out of my mind; you'll see why. I heard it just after Charles MacIvor entered the room through the window. I heard this loud click, and not knowing who he was, of course, I jumped to the conclusion that he was a housebreaker, and armed. Miss Burton also recognized the sound. In the excitement of all that had happened since, I forgot about the noise."

Mr. Almy had been listening carefully. Now he said:

"I wanted to see you not only about the matter of the returned law book, Miss Fuller; I am going to request you to accompany me this afternoon to Miss Grosvenor's. Especially in the light of these new facts you have reported, she must be urged to tell everything she knows about this mystery of her grandfather's death. She is quite plainly concealing information, and does herself more harm each day that passes."

"She's sacrificing herself," said I. "And if it's not for that wretched cousin of hers, I'm much mistaken."

But Mr. Almy said nothing further except that he would join me after luncheon for the visit to Normandy terrace, and I had risen to go, when the door opened without warning, and there stood Daisy Abbott, in her street things.

"Oh, pardon me!" she exclaimed. "I saw you going in here, Miss Fuller; I didn't know any one else was here. I thought you must be doing some special work, but ventured to interrupt you to say good-by."

I stretched my hand across the desk, beginning: "Good-by and good luck! Don't forget all about us!" when I was suddenly aware that Daisy's hand had dropped back to her side, that her eyes had fallen past my outstretched hand to the desk; that they were riveted on that much-handled yellow note, which had been lying unheeded for some minutes beside the bookplate.

"Where did that come from?" burst from Daisy's lips involuntarily, in a perfectly unearthly whisper.

"It fell out of a book in the history section. Why, did you put it there, Miss Abbott?" demanded Mr. Almy, vigorously, springing up. "Answer me!"

"Oh, dear" she moaned. "I did wish I had thrown it away, afterward, but I couldn't find the book I put it in! Anyway, I did keep it, I knew it would be wicked to destroy it. He was always so nice, I couldn't believe it meant anything, really, especially when Mr. Case—oh, dear, and I thought I was going to get off all right, after all I've suffered so horribly this whole dreadful week!"

And Mr. Almy's adjurations to stop talking nonsense and tell everything she knew about that yellow note passed unheeded. She proceeded to go into the finest fit of hysterics I have ever been privileged to witness. Even Mr. Almy, when he and I set forth for Normandy terrace somewhat later, admitted that it was in its way a masterpiece!

"Moreover, they did us a good turn," he observed quite truly, alluding to the hysterics.

For when Daisy had ultimately been restored to coherence, her innumerable sobs and sniffs and tears brought the happy climax of a confession that she had been bad, but was good now.

"Well, then, if you're good now, you aren't afraid to tell me all you know about it, are you?" Mr. Almy asked.

"Oh, no, not you!" murmured Daisy, melted by his sweet virility, and seeing her game was up anyhow. "Well, the first I saw of it was when Professor Harrington gave it to me last Monday morning with that list of books he wanted written on it. He said he would look over fiction in the center aisle while I got the books. I brought him the first four, laying them on the table beside him with the list on top, so he could see they were just what he ordered, and said I would bring the fifth as soon as possible. It took three or four minutes to find; then, as I brought it down the aisle, Professor Harrington came forward and took it, and said as he had some classes to meet directly at the university, he would take all the books right along without wrapping.

"As soon as he had gone, I saw his list lying on the floor of the aisle, and picked it up to throw it away. I noticed it was all torn, but the professor is such a nervous man I thought he must just have been fussing with it while he was reading.

Liked Old Costumes, but Stuck to Modern

Looking at some pictures of Ireland, old and new, a friend remarked the other day that men on the streets of Dublin looked like men on the streets of New Bedford, and pointed regretfully to the posed picture of the typical Irish countryman of an older day, with his breeches and his characteristic hat and stick.

"What a pity they haven't stuck to the old costumes," "Well," I said, "they haven't; but if you are stuck on that rig there is nothing on earth to prevent you wearing one like it." He said that was different. "Doubtless," I went on, "you admire the Hungarian women in their quaint old-style dress." He said he did. "Do you want your wife to dress that way?" But he said that, too, was different.

"If you are so strong for the old and the picturesque," I persisted, "you might wear silk knee breeches and stockings and a gilt-buttoned coat and an elaborate starched, ruffled collar and a three-pointed hat, just like your Revolutionary forbears." But it was no use. I couldn't interest him in wearing old clothes, and he wouldn't think of cooking his meal in an open fireplace, preferring the standardized, dull, stupid gas stove with hot-water attachment.—C. G., in New Bedford Standard.

As Requested

A rather supercilious youth entered a barber's shop and asked for his hair to be cut a la mode.

The knight of the shears set to work, and while his customer was engrossed in the contents of a humorous weekly, cut off all his hair.

The youth suddenly caught sight of his shaven poll in a mirror, and was very annoyed.

"What have you done that for?" he demanded angrily.

"I cut it just as you said," declared the barber. "You wanted it all mowed, and there you are!"

Put Implicit Faith in Flower "Oracles"

Perhaps the most familiar of all ways of consulting fate by means of a flower is the pulling off of the petals. But this is not the only way. An American in England, visiting an ancient and remote country inn, one day missed her way in rambling corridors and entered by mistake the bedroom of her pretty chambermaid. The girl was there, changing her dress, and she offered presently to guide the lady back to her apartment. In the brief walt the visitor noticed something that struck her as odd. So she asked why a certain little plant had been pinned up on the wall. "Surely it will fade unless it is put in water," she said.

"Beg pardon, ma'am, but it won't," replied the girl with pride and satisfaction in her voice. "That's a pin plant and it's been growing there a week. Every bud has opened, too. It's doing fine."

It was a pretty tuft of yellow stonecrop, starred with little golden flowers. A few questions about its uses as a "pin plant," and the girl, laughing and blushing, admitted that it was customary among the girls of the village to pin a tuft of the budded plant upon their bedroom wall as an oracle of love. If it lived feebly but did not bloom, their present love affairs would come to nothing; if it withered and died, they would meet disaster in love; but if at the end of a few days the little plant, suspended by a loosely tied thread head downward from its pin, began to curve its stems upward until they stood upright and finally the tips burst into bloom—then all was well, and they might expect to marry and live happy ever after.

Call Vance Strike-Out King

THERE may be several distinctive "schools of thought" in baseball, but Dazzy Vance, Brooklyn's great right-hander, isn't going to become gray-haired trying to out-think any batters.

Vance's idea of outguessing a batter is to put extra steam on his fast ball. He never uses a change of pace. His only counter for the fast ball is a quick-breaking curve.

"I can't slow-ball 'em," the Robin pitcher said. "When I started out in the majors in 1914 with Pittsburgh I had that idea of mixing them up. When I went to the Yankees two years later I had the same system. All that ever came of that system was that my arm became sore."

Arthur C. Vance, as the record books list him, doesn't have to worry along about whether this batter or that hits a fast ball or a slow ball. In a pinch Dazzy's best bet is a pitch that is just too speedy for the batter to follow.

Kiki Cuyler, Pirate batting star, declares Dazzy has the fastest ball of any pitcher in the league and believes most of the men who face the Brooklyn veteran will agree.

Dazzy Vance.

Vance earned the title of "strike-out king" in 1924 with Brooklyn. He fanned out 262 batters, a record not quite equal to the best marks of Walter Johnson, but one that the Washington veteran has bettered only twice in twenty years.

Vance has played with Red Cloud in the Nebraska State league, the Yankees, Pittsburgh, St. Joseph, Toledo, Memphis, Rochester, Sacramento, New Orleans and Brooklyn. After failing to make good with the Yanks and the Pirates he drifted through the minors until he had perfected his curve ball and mastered control. He has been with Brooklyn since 1922.

Great-Grandfather, 84, Still Keen Net Player

A. Morse, eighty-four years old and a great-grandfather, is one of the keenest tennis enthusiasts in Great Britain and still plays the game, which he took up at the age of forty-one.

As a boy of twenty he left England for India, and for a number of years participated in cricket, hockey and big game hunting. Returning to Scotland, he began to play tennis and won the mixed doubles championship with his daugher at the Albemarle club of Beckenham.

He is now a member of the Feltham Lawn Tennis club and plays regularly throughout the season. Last year, with his daughter, who is a grandmother, he played against the club's leading pair and made an excellent showing.

McGraw Puts Huge Value on Connie Mack's Aces

An outfield of Al Simmons, Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb, with all three in their prime, would be worth $800,000 in the estimation of John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants.

"Simmons is worth $150,000 to any ball club," McGraw said. "If Speaker were in his prime, I'd give $250,000 for him, and if Cobb were the Cobb of old, I'd be glad to pay $400,000 for him."

Miller Huggins, manager of the Yankees, believes the Athletics' outfield is worth about $125,000 today.

"But if Cobb and Speaker were at their best along with Simmons, they'd be worth about $500,000," he said.

Commission Is Named to Pick Best Ball Player

President E. S. Barnard, of the American league, has announced the following commission to choose the most valuable baseball player for the 1928 season:

Paul Shannon, Boston Post; Harry Neily, Chicago American; Ed Bang, Cleveland News; H. G. Salsinger, Detroit News; William B. Hanna, New York Herald-Tribune; James B. Isaminger, Philadelphia Enquirer; J. Ed Wray, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and Denman Thompson, Washington Star.

The player selected will receive $1,000 in addition to the souvenir testimonial.

First Hawaiian Open Is Carded for Next Winter

The first Hawaiian open golf championship will be held in Honolulu for three days during the first week in December. A purse of $5,000 has been hung up for the winner of the 72-hole contest, in which a number of golfers of high rating are expected to participate.

Invitations will be sent to fifteen of the leading professionals to play for the prize which includes free transportation from the Pacific coast to Hawaii and return, with free hotel accommodations in Honolulu.

Play Best at Home

Statisticians could produce figures showing just exactly how much better the big league teams average in the won and lost column at home than on the road, but nobody has explained why a ball club should play better in its home park than in the others. The parks do not vary enough in shape to affect the games much. As many games are played away from home as at home, so it is not a question of getting used to the playing field. Players say it is the breaks.

Elder, Track Star, Is Sparing of Words

Jack Elder, fleet sprinter of Notre Dame, and one of the school's most promising candidates for the Olympic team, is a word miser.

Elder's taciturnity was demonstrated after he had tied the world's record for the 75-yard dash at the Illinois relays.

Upon returning to the gym quarters, a teammate on the rubbing table asked Elder how he came out.

"First," replied the runner.

"Good! What was the time?"

"Seven two-fifths."

"What's the record?"

"That's it."

See Another Argument

Guy Lacy, who would not join the Cleveland Indians a couple of years ago, because of a salary dispute, and who now is with Bridgeport in the Eastern league, may find himself in another argument next spring with some big league club if he doesn't let down. It's this way: Lacy is playing such a fine game at second for Bridgeport, and hitting so well, several major league clubs want him. Maybe this time, they will be more considerate in negotiations with the lad.

Is THIRTY the Love Deadline?

James J. Montague was born in Mason City, Iowa, but soon migrated to Oregon. While there, he worked on the Morning Oregonian. Arthur Brisbane saw some of his editorials and made overtures which resulted in Mr. Montague's coming to New York. That was the beginning of seventeen years in the service of the Hearst organization, during which period Montague was managing editor of the New York Evening Journal, wrote a daily verse and still does under a heading he himself originated, "More Truth Than Poetry." He covered all the big stories, winding up with the peace conference. When Jimmy resigned from the Hearst organization he became associated with a newspaper syndicate. In addition to this he writes for the Sunday papers a weekly humorous story, and in his spare time turns out a daily editorial. He fills in by producing an occasional magazine story. Mr. Montague is over thirty, and is married.

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

Thackeray accounted for a famous British general's popularity with women by explaining that he allowed them to give him money. There is no devotion comparable with that which is engendered by the bestowing of favors. I have known elderly theatrical managers to bankrupt themselves trying vainly to make stars out of their wives. And the more money they lost the more ardent became their affection for the pretty little dumbbells, who never could learn to do anything but stand still and look beautiful.

If love means unselfish devotion—and it ought to—men who are past thirty are more capable of possessing it than men under thirty. And their capacity increases as they reach maturer years—which often are years of indiscretion. The youthful husband thinks a good deal about himself. When his "passions once have lost their brutal force," as Tennyson said in a mean poem he wrote about a girl who refused him, he begins to wonder what kind of a break he is getting out of wedded life. He "looks out of the window" oftener than an older man does. He thinks tenderly of the girls he might have had, and is prone to imagine that they wouldn't have taken him as a matter of course so early in the game, and scolded him for leaving cigarette ashes around the house and spending so much time on the golf course.

After that he begins to feel sorry for himself, and the fine edge of the romance is over. But there is something almost maternal in the affection of a man of more advanced years, and there is no greater love than mother love. He is transported to think that this lovely creature—even though she were a spinster of thirty or more when he married her—has really consented to let him give her flowers, and take her to the theater, and sit patiently around modistes' shops while she tries on costumes. He thinks up little surprises to delight her. He gets out of the weekly poker event, and actually takes her around the golf course with him every day. I have yet to see a young man doing that more than a couple of times in a year.

Most young men are fairly swollen with conceit if, before attaining thirty, they have accumulated enough money to support a wife in reasonable comfort. Such a man wants her to listen and understand him when he brings home the figures on the balance sheet, and tells her how the advice he gave the sales manager resulted in a record business for the year. He expects that she will be thrilled with all the shop talk which he can get no one else to listen to, and that she will even remain attentive when he relates the struggles of his early youth.

And when she yawns through his conversation, suggests going out to the theater or the movies, he begins to think that he is not appreciated, and she is no longer as beautiful or as intelligent in his eyes as she was in the days of the courtship. He may get used to her after that, and regard her with a sort of desperate tolerance, but it would be somewhat inaccurate to term that sort of feeling love.

The word "dote" means to love, and the word "dotard" means an old gentleman. Perhaps there is some etymological connection between them. Anyway, men who get married after thirty, while they are far more easily the victims of female fortune hunters, are far less likely to try to break out of the trap, and far more apt to glory in their fetters. When there is a break it is usually due to the lady, for she is always romantic, and seldom can help regretting that she didn't meet John Barrymore a little earlier. About women, I am not so sure. Nobody is, or ever has been. Yet I know of a number of them who have married after thirty, and who still believe that little, ugly husbands have the physical attractiveness of a movie star, the strength of Gene Tunney, and the mentality of all the world's greatest thinkers—including philosophers—rolled into one. It is the maternal instinct in them that makes them love the men they married. And men, born of women, inherit maternal instincts too. That is what makes them ardent lovers after thirty, provided they marry girls who do not try to boss them, but continue to be clinging vines.

Far be it from me to enter into an academic argument with such a scholarly gentleman and profound thinker and observer as Mr. Will Durant. In default of equipment all I can say is that I believe he is wrong. His rea-

Nab Alien Smugglers

Brownsville, Texas.—With the trial conviction and sentencing to jail of Isaac Amram and Juan Samano on charges of smuggling aliens into the United States, it is believed by United States immigration authorities here that the two leaders of a far-reaching band of border lawbreakers have been disposed of, temporarily at least. An investigation is now being made to determine whether or not the smuggling organization had ramifications in New York, Europe and the different ports of Mexico. Hundreds of aliens, most of them Greeks and Italians, were clandestinely brought across the Rio Grande by Amram and Samano.

Amram, who is only twenty-six years old, speaks English, Spanish, French Greek, Italian, German and Turkish fluently and has a smattering of various other tongues and dialects. He has traveled extensively through Europe, Asia, Spanish America and the United States, acquiring his education in this country.

Charge is $100 a Head

According to his story, his grandfather, a Spaniard, settled in Turkey, and he was born in that country, coming to Mexico several years ago. Some of the languages he acquired as a youth along the Mediterranean; others he studied in universities.

Juan Samano was until recently a magistrate at Reynosa, Mexico. According to Amram's version of the gang's activities, Italians and Greeks were brought across the river, the smugglers charging $100 a head for this service.

Belief that the organized gang of alien smugglers operating from Reynosa had been broken up by the arrest of Samano and Amram was expressed by Brownsville immigration officers, who assert that through the activities of the organization many Greeks and Italians were brought to this side of the Rio Grande. The confession of Amram and the details brought out in stories told by the captured aliens coincided.

Leader Smuggled In.

American immigration officials had ascertained from several Greeks and Italians, apprehended after they had crossed the river, that Samano was a member of the organization which had its headquarters at Reynosa and had been endeavoring for several weeks to effect his capture. He was finally apprehended at the American customs office at Hidalgo when he crossed to get a manifest on an automobile he had purchased.

Amram stated he was smuggled across the river at Reynosa two years ago, Samano aiding him; that he went to New York, where he was employed as a musician, and later came back to the border and became a member of the Reynosa band.

Mexico Palace Addition Cost Lives of 80 Workmen

Mexico City.—When the magnificent fourth floor addition to the National palace is completed, its cost will have to be reckoned not only in pesos, but in human life. To date eighty workmen have been killed in falls and other accidents resulting from building operations on the upper extension of the administrative edifice of Mexico's federal government.

Girls Wear "Galluses" Just to Mock the Men

Visalia, Calif.—Not to be outdone by the men of the Tulare county courthouse, girl employees have taken to wearing suspenders. When young men clerks and deputies suddenly appeared in the courthouse wearing "galluses," Mrs. Edna Dewey Harkins, deputy county recorder, started something by donning a pair of red suspenders, and now there is an epidemic.

Iron and Steel

Steel is not a separate element, but is made from iron with carbon and other ingredients added. The thing making steel good or bad is largely in the way it is treated as it cools and crystalizes. Steel is a great improvement over iron and enables us to do many things we could not have done with iron.

FORCED SALES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

I THINK of all the salesmen who come upon one unexpectedly and try to persuade one to buy, the book agent through all time has been the most unpopular. I suppose the reason is that few people have any innate longing for books and especially for such books as the salesman going from door to door is trying to dispose of. If he is to be successful he must first create an interest and a desire and then attempt to satisfy it. This requires tact, a knowledge of human nature and how it is influenced, and, of course, persistence, and this last quality is ordinarily all that the wandering salesman of books has developed. If he succeeds in making a sale it is usually a forced sale.

Webster was telling me not long ago something of his experience while in college. He went out during his summer vacation to sell books. He had never had any experience before and he knew nothing of salesmanship excepting to hang on when he got hold of a prospective customer. The territory to which he was assigned was a pretty barren rural community.

The book he was trying to sell had no particular merit. The people to whom he was attempting to sell it did not want it, if they were persuaded to buy it in order to get rid of Webster it would most probably lie with the family Bible on the center table in the sitting room unread and useless. Anyway they could not afford to buy it, and Webster knew this as he looked about him better possibly than anyone else. When he succeeded in making a forced sale he felt as if he had robbed an orphan asylum or sandbagged a blind man. Webster got away with the job, however. He hung on and haggled and argued the question until in sheer desperation his victims signed on the dotted line. He was broadcast as a salesman de luxe and his picture was displayed in the advertising of the company for whom he was working, and yet it was really poor salesmanship which he exhibited.

A conservative Englishman, the head of a large retail establishment, is said to have announced that he would dismiss any of his salesmen who sold a customer anything which he did not want. There were to be no forced sales in his establishment. No customer who came into his store need fear being leadpiped and sold a gold brick before he got out.

I have been called on once a year for more than a score of years by the most perfect salesman I have ever known. I heard a few weeks ago that he was dead and I am truly sorry. He never urged me to buy; he never even brought up the subject of my buying. He made an appointment with me in advance for a definite time, and as reliable as clockwork he appeared then. He simply spread his wares before me, pointing out the particular merits of this or that, and he did it all quickly, courteously, and with a subtle appeal which I was never able to resist, but it wasn't a forced sale. When he went away I felt that he had done me a service.

Ready to Face Antarctic Dangers

Rang Many a Knell

San Francisco.—Priceless relic of early days in San Francisco, the Vigilante bell that used to summon the people to council and war at Fort Gunnybags, here in the '50s, has been hung in the marine deaprtment of the chamber of commerce, a gift to the chamber from the First Baptist church of Petaluma.

Stirring memories of those times which tried the hearts of San Francisco's best men and the necks of her worst were recalled when Robert Newton Lynch, vice president and general manager of the chamber, announced the presentation. It was through his efforts that the bell was brought back here.

The bell was purchased in 1856 by the Vigilante committee, of which W. T. Coleman was then president. It was bought from a Boston firm of metal workers, Conroy & Connors, weighed 1,100 pounds, and cost $1,500. It is bronze.

Hung in the steeple of old Fort Gunnybags, it sounded the death knell of many a reckless villain, proclaimed peace and victory to the upright and struck terror to the hearts of the vicious when the Vigilantes found it necessary to take the law into their own hands.

In 1858, when the bell no longer was required, the residents of Petaluma bought it from the Vigilantes for $550 and hung it in their first Baptist church. There it was used both for religious services and as a time bell, sounding the hour at 6 a. m., noon and 6 p. m.

When the Civil war started, Union sympathizers rang it to announce Northern victories and those friendly to the Southern cause became angry. To prevent discord among members of the community, the bell was taken down and hauled away one dark night to a warehouse. A few hours later Northern sympathizers returned it to the steeple, hoisting the Stars and Stripes above it.

The next night a Southerner made his way unobserved into the belfry, and with a hammer sought to silence the bell forever. He made a big crack in it, not unlike that in the famous Liberty bell, but this had no silencing effect. The bell remained in use until 1907, and its chimes could be heard through the countryside within a ten mile radius.

Big Oil Company Uses Goats to Cut Its Grass

Oklahoma City, Okla.—The mowing machine and lawn mower business took a blow at Ponca City, Okla., recently when a big oil company decided to use goats to keep the grass cut on its 160-acre tank farm. There are on the farm more than 100 tanks, holding about 140,000,000 gallons of crude oil and gasoline, and strict precautions against fire are necessary. As goats do not play with fire, they won the contract on the grounds of safety and economy.

Makes 14th South Sea Trip to Study Snails

New York.—Snails offer "a sure proof of evolution," says Henry E. Crampton, professor of zoology in Barnard college, who has sailed from Vancouver, B. C., on his fourteenth expedition to the South Sea islands to study land snails living on bushes in the high mountain valleys of the oriental and American tropics.

"I care nothing and know nothing about snails," the professor said. "My interest is in the history which they have written down, for those who can read it, of the processes by which evolution comes about in wild nature.

"How the snails differ from valley to valley, from island to island, and from group to group, is part of the story. Principles of their distribution are to be derived from their layout. When the distribution is analyzed, we obtain sure proof of evolution."

Death From Heart Disease on Gain

London.—The mental and emotional strain of modern life is mainly responsible for the 400 per cent increase in deaths from fear, disease in Great Britain and other countries, in the opinion of Dr. J. Strickland Goodall, London cardiologist and physician.

"While the death rate from cancer has increased rather less than 25 per cent, that from heart disease has increased nearly 400 per cent," Doctor Goodall informed members of the Institute of Hygiene.

"The form in which we take our pleasure," he asserted, "is a direct inversion of nature's demands for adequate rest."

The habits of visiting night clubs, drinking cocktails and smoking excessively were listed by Doctor Goodall among the destructive pleasures. He further maintained that "the emotional character of modern plays, novels and films, with their appeals to the baser passions, inevitably tends to overstrain, with results which are reflected in the enormously increased number of deaths from heart disease."

These deaths are occurring at an earlier age than formerly, Doctor Goodall reported. Whereas a few years ago the common age of sudden death was between fifty and sixty years, an analysis of recent deaths had disclosed that "the age is becoming much less."

The physician recalled that 12 persons died suddenly in the United States while listening to the running account of the Tunney-Dempsey fight in Chicago, and that seven of these succumbed when Tunney was floored in the seventh round. He attributed all to emotional strain.

A critical investigation of thousands of cases of sudden death shows, said Doctor Goodall, that most of them are due to arterio-sclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, a disease often caused by hard physical work, mental strain and emotion.

Where Gold and Silver Are Trodden in Dirt

Algiers, Morocco.—Gold and silver "dust" that has been accumulating for centuries is to be taken from Moroccan jewelers' "souks" and sold. The "souks" are the market places: Jewelers, like all other tradesmen, work there in the open or in squalid little shops, son succeeding father in the business, always on the same spot.

The "sweepings" so valuable in American and European jewelry workrooms, never have been gathered and smelted here. The first effort to do this will be tried by a newly formed French company, whose experts believe there are fortunes in gold and silver filings trodden into the dirt floors of the native shops.

Last Resort

Professor Jordan was bewailing the fact that cultured reading is apparently on the decline. All reading, he declares, and is inclined to blame it on the movies.

"I do not consider the trashy magazines as reading," he continued, "but even these, I am told, have lost a great many former admirers. As for the younger generation, it apparently does not even know how to read.

"Only the other day, I said to a small friend of mine, 'Johnny, what have you been reading lately?' To which the urchin replied in surprise: "'Me reading? Gosh, I haven't been sick!'"

Cotton Statistics

The Department of Commerce, which has been investigating the possibility of finding new uses for cotton, has discovered that there are already 1,000 uses for the 135 base fabrics made wholly or in part from the staple. Some 150 different articles made of cotton are used on farms, 100 in households, 43 by railroads and 20 in industry, yet per capita consumption has gained only slightly in the last decade.

It doesn't seem to be sufficiently impressed on anybody that life is short.

GOVERNMENT MEN DESTROY PLANTS OF BLACK CURRANT

Move To Eradicate Pine Blister Rust By Removing Host

As an emergency phase in the war on the cultivated English black currant to prevent the spread of the white pine blister rust disease into California, government inspectors F. G. Macomber and H. P. Backus are now inspecting Redwood City and vicinity in order to locate and destroy plantings of the black currants.

Aiding in this war of ostracizing the black currants, which are the most susceptible of all plants to the pine disease, the state legislature at its last session passed a law making it a misdemeanor to grow, sell or distribute these bushes. The measure was passed in an effort to aid the federal government in its eradication work with black currants in order to protect the sugar pine timber, a true white pine which is valued in this state at more than 120 million dollars. The greater portion of this timber is located along the Sierra Nevada range.

Government pathologists, who have made a study of this white pine disease for many years, have found that it will not spread directly from one pine to another, but most complete one phase of its cycle on the leaves of the currant or gooseberry bushes. Of all the plants investigated they found that the cultivated English black currant, Ribes nigrum, is the most susceptible of all to the disease spores which come from the infected pines.

Although the disease has not been found in California as yet it is, however, established in British Columbia, Washington and Oregon. Its presence in Oregon makes it of vital importance to this state. Cultivated black currants have already been eradicated in Washington, Oregon and the northern portion of this state.

The peculiar nature of the disease which requires an alternate host in order to spread, is used as a means of checking it. Investigations have definitely shown that the disease will not spread directly from pine to pine but must go back to the leaves of the currant bush. If all currant and gooseberry bushes could be removed the disease would be stamped out when the trees already infected would die and it could never spread. Unfortunately this step is not feasible so only the very susceptible black currants are being removed as an emergency preventive measure.

"Many persons," said Mr. Macomber, "wonder how the removal of a few black currant bushes growing in a back yard and many miles away from any white pine timber can prevent the spread of this disease. The answer is that cases have been known where currant have become infected 200 miles away from diseased pines. In this manner new centers of infection are liable to be established many miles away from established areas of pine infections through the presence of these few scattered bushes in back yards." The inspectors report, however, that most everyone is willing to sacrifice their black currant in order to prevent the spread of the disease.

The control work is being conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture in cooperation wit the California Department of Agriculture, the State Board of Forestry and the University of California aided by the Forest Service and the various members of the [illegible] sion Service.
